DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. The Declaration filed on 1-30-04 under 37 CFR 1.131 is sufficient to overcome the Lebel et al. reference.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 27-28 and 31-40 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

3. The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

4. Claims 27-28 and 31-40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. (Written Description).

The instant claims are drawn to a genetically recombinant tobacco or alfalfa plant which is stably transformed to contain and express a gene sequence which encodes T. fusca cellulase E2 or E3, and methods of using said recombinant plant for producing cellulose-degrading enzymes, and in methods for ensilement.

The instant disclosure provides only the nucleotide sequences of SEQ ID NO: 1 and 2, wherein said sequences encode T. fusca cellulase E2 and T. fusca cellulase E3, respectively, cellulose-degrading genes. No additional nucleic acids encoding cellulose-degrading enzymes are disclosed in the specification as filed. Additionally, there is no information in the literature or in the specification as filed that would allow the skilled artisan to predict if genes within this genus are very similar or what particular structural and physical characteristics would define the claimed genus. In addition, it is not clear whether these genes will be able to produce a functional protein when expressed in a plant.

See the Guidelines for Examination of Patent Applications Under the 35 USC 112 ¶ 1, “Written Description” Requirement (Vol. 66, No. 4, pages 1099-1111). These guidelines state that: “To satisfy the written description requirement, a patent specification must describe the claimed invention in sufficient detail that one skilled in the art can reasonably conclude that the inventor had possession of the claimed invention. An applicant shows possession of the claimed invention by describing the claimed invention with all of its limitations using such descriptive means as words, structures, figures, diagrams, and formulas that fully set forth the claimed invention. Possession may be shown in a variety of ways including description of an actual reduction to practice, or by showing that the invention was “ready for patenting” such as by the disclosure of drawings or structural chemical formulas that show that the invention was complete, or by describing distinguishing identifying characteristics sufficient to show that applicant was in possession of the claimed invention.”

Moreover, according to MPEP § 2163[R-1]I.A. “The claimed invention as a whole may not be adequately described where an invention is described solely in terms of a method of its making coupled with its function and there is no described or art-recognized correlation or relationship between the structure of the invention and its function. A biomolecule sequence described only by a functional characteristic, without any known or disclosed correlation between that function and the structure of the sequence, normally is not a sufficient identifying characteristic for written description purposes, even when accompanied by a method of obtaining the claimed sequence.” In the instant case, Applicants have not provided sufficient structural information that would allow the skilled artisan to precisely predict the structure of the broad genus of compounds claimed by Applicants.

Therefore, with the exception of the nucleotide sequences of SEQ ID NO: 1 and 2, Applicants were not in possession of the full scope of gene sequences that encode a T. fusca E2 or E3 cellulase.
